

Smithsonian Office of Fellowships and Internships
Digital Publicity Internship

Project Title	Smithsonian Office of Fellowships and Internships Digital Publicity Internship
Project Summary	Want to learn how the largest museum communicates with a range of audiences to excite the learning in everyone? You might be interested in a Smithsonian Virtual Internship.
Country	United States

Project Description

As part of it's work to strengthen, diversify, and develop academic appointments across the Smithsonian, the Smithsonian Office of Fellowships and Internships maintains a variety of communication channels including an active blog and weekly email newsletter.

This internship offers an opportunity for an intern to learn about how these channels are used to engage a variety of audiences interested in SI academic appointment opportunities. Specifically, based on content offered by OFI, the intern will be responsible for producing one blog post every week (1 post due every Monday). Once this is mastered, interns may also have an opportunity to edit the weekly OFI Email Newsletter.

Required Skills or Interests

- Skill(s)
- Social media management
- Storytelling/blogging/vlogging
- Website design

Additional Information

As a virtual intern, applicants must be prepared to remain organized and disciplined about meeting their weekly blog post deadline. This opportunity is especially ideal for anyone interested in stories relating to art, history, culture, and natural science - all of which are areas in which the Smithsonian sustains high engagement. For more information, check out the OFI blog at <https://www.smithsonianofi.com/>

Language Requirements

None